Mr. Mellon Knows Money
The Harden Attack
Mr. Gee Jon Objects
Seize Coal? Of Course!

By Arthur Brisbane

Investor, 1922 Star Oct. 3
Mr. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, announces a cut of one thousand and fourteen million dollars in the debt of the U. S. in the past year.

In this case "money talks," and says that President Harding was wise in selecting a man who knew something about money to manage the money of the United States.

Mr. Mellon, said to be the second richest man in the world, must know about saving as well as making. No man ever made money, unless by accident, until he had learned to save it.

The attempt to murder the German editor, Maximilian Harden, whose real name is Wittkowski, is partly an attack on the German republic, which Harden's intelligence represents, and partly an expression of the nationalism now increasing everywhere in Europe.

Friends of the Hohenzollerns will find, however, that in the long run the game of politics by murder is not profitable, and many can play at that game, France and other countries have taught the world that the game, well under way, is more dangerous to royalties than to republicans.

This incident, in Nevada, is interesting after several centuries of "civilization." Two Chinese gentlemen, named Huan Shing and Gee Jon, are sentenced to die by "lethal gas," a new-fangled method of executing murderers in Nevada.

The criminal is locked in a lethal chamber, police gas is introduced and he dies.

A lawyer for the Chinese criminals says they must die that way, because the United States Constitution forbids "cruel and unusual punishment."

The State of Nevada denies that the gas death is cruel; it can't, of course, deny that it is inhuman. But the Constitution says cruel and unusual.

The situation is complicated by the fact that employees in the coal mines do not know exactly how to go about gaining the coal. The Chinese miner says the State Architect must fix the lethal chamber, so that witnesses may look in and see what happens without danger from the gas.

The best plan would be for Nevada to repeal the lethal penalty.

It's a peaceful State, apart from matrimonial fights, that come in from the Huan Shing and Gee Jon are the first two gully of murder since 1898 in Nevada.

The government may seize coal mines and operate them for the people.

Why not? Does that sound Socialistic or indicate contempt for property rights?

"Rights" to coal, manufactured by Nature millions of years ago, deposited in the ground for man's use, seem rather vague.

Suppose instead of coal, all water were "owned" by the men, who quarried with their workmen, and announced that, temporarily, the people have no water?

When the people get thirsty they would seize the water and overlook the "property rights."

THE WEATHER

Heater and Ventilator Showers followed by generally fair tonight; Thursday fair with rising temperatures; moderate to fresh easterly winds.

Lynn Mayor Defies Neal

BATTLE OF BOULEVARDES GOES ON

Lynn Executive Says That He Would Have Given 1,000 Permits

"The Mayor's a good boy, but he's young yet," State Fire Marshal George C. Neal, said today.

"On with the bonfires, I'm Mayor. They could have had a thousand had they asked for them," Harland A. McPherson, Mayor of Lynn, said.

There's the merry battle between Lynn's soldierly Mayor and the State fire marshal on the matter of "right, before-fourth" bonfires. That's how it stands today.

Harland Neal said "no bonfires" on the night before. Mayor McPherson ignored his order and gave permits for several, on a 1,000-barrel affair that was described by the side as a "baptism."

"They could have had a thousand had they wanted them," said the Mayor.

He was supposed to be facing arrest today, but as a hero Mayor McPherson said today.

Harding Eager for Day When He Can Go Home to Stay

Marion, July 5 (By the Associated Press)—President Harding was just a plain citizen today in his own home town.

He spent the day with his family, some of his intimate friends and "the boys" at the Marston star office.

Mr. Harding told an audience at the fair grounds he would welcome the day when he could come back to stay permanently.

"Some of you may think it's a fine thing to be President," he added. "Keep on thinking it—you'll find the situation very different when you wake up."

GARAGE PERMIT UPHOLD BY COURT

The Supreme Court today decided that the street commissioners of Boston have no right to rescind a permit allowing the General Baking Company to erect a garage at Tremont, Edgeworth and Fern streets in Charlestown. The permit was granted Sept. 31, 1921, and revoked the following December. The company sued, and the court decided that the commissioners had no power under the law to revoke the permit.

GERALD CHAPMAN.

IDENTIFIED AS LEADER OF RANDOLPH GANG

Gerald Chapman, alias Edward Bryce, sought for months as leader of the gang of bandits who held up the Randolph Savings Bank at Randolph in November, 1919, escaping with $40,000, is under arrest in New York.

He is one of three men taken as suspects in the recent $2,000,000 mail robbery in New York. More than $500,000 of the stolen loot in this robbery has been recovered.

Chapman, one of the most picturesque criminals in America, was captured with his associates following an imprisonment of a crook by a Federal agent, who gained the confidence of the three men. The other two arrested in New York were George Anderson and Charles Lambert.

While he was being questioned about his connection with the New York mail robbery, an express held up in Niagara, N. Y., in which $60,000 was stolen, and the $40,000 hold up of the Randolph Bank, Chapman was known to his associates as "The Count."

He has been positively identified as the leader of the four men who held up the Randolph Bank. An indictment warrant charging him with robbing the bank was forwarded to New York today. He was secretly indicted by the Norfolk County Grand Jury after a positive identification.

HURT DIVING FROM PLANE INTO OCEAN
Ashbury Park, N. J., July 4.—Charles N. Fitzgerald, an aerial artist, dived into the Atlantic ocean from an airplane at an altitude of 200 feet. BURBANK SAYS U. S. IS FACING HUNGER

By Compendium News Service, Santa Rosa, Cal., July 4.—"Many of us now living in the United States will go hungry in the next fifty years unless inventions to increase the productivity of the soil are marketed," Luther Burbank, plant wizard and acclaimed the nation's living agriculturalist, declared today. "The maximum production of foodstuffs for acre has been reached. The greatest number of people who can be supported on an acre of land is about five. If all what food luxuries only about two can be supported," Burbank said. "The United States is beginning to be over-populated in a measure, I believe. The best and most prosperous days, agriculturally, are passing. When they are gone we will never see them again. "We must begin to live more economically. The average person will very shortly be obliged to give up all food luxuries just as the Chinese and other inhabitants of densely populated countries. "Civilized peoples today are drawing on food supplies of the more fertile regions. Even the United States is beginning to import considerable food, mainly from the tropical regions. When nations become so densely populated there is either war or famine. Lack of food has caused more wars than the average person imagines. There will always be war for this reason. "I do not believe that any of the so-called massive cultivations of land will bring in better yields. Agriculture today has about reached the stage where it is impossible to get greater returns from the soil."

FOLKS JOIN THE FUN AT THE ANNUAL JAZZ PICNIC

GAY FROLIC AT FRANK L. DORR'S RAYMOND PERSONNEL ON ANNUAL FROLIC GIRL TRYING TO BE SAVED BY HEEL

By J. F. G.

"If you're going to use my name," said Wesley Jones, "I'd sort like to have you use my full name. My full name is John Wesley Standawake Henry Ward Beecher Jones."

He hit off half of a generous ice cream cake reflectively and let it slide down his throat.

"I wish to be that outgoing," he said, shaking his head. "There ain't nothing I know of more than a little get-together affair. Doggone look at that airplane." He pointed at a far-off speck in the sky. "May, eh, my, just look at that boat float."

Wesley buttoned his bandman's coat and his eyes became glued to the horizon.

Just then the Framingham band began to die its stuff and with it Wesley's ear. He had floated by the arm of her John, while Billy, the office boy, some other than Freddy Adams, flicked his fishing rod and tried to pull out either then deep-chested notes.

EVERYBODY WAS EYES.

Over by the barn a tall gentleman with a regular fellow look bent time with his sport shoe, while his sportswear daughter saw that everybody was eyes. The gentleman sat out of a lunch box and ate with a relish. His daughter didn't stop to eat. She was too busy.

Tommy Cotton dressed up as the Mayor of Townsville, fed his vest-pocket prop "Laws," and proudly showed to whoever cared to look the sign he had carried on the parade float through the three-mile parade. "I got this at Raymond's."

About the highway, on the lawn and the terrace flowed back and forth, and out of 100 lunch-chewing mouths came laughter and happy conversation.

The boys and girls, old and young, who work at Raymond's, "Where U Bot the Hat," were putting on the feed bag at the second annual outing at their "big-brother" boss' place at Framingham. Frank L. Dor, the gentleman said it is Frank we allude to with the happy look extending man-sized sandwiches out of a lunch box by the barn while his feet moved to the same law but harmony as did the generous "dog" of Wesley Jones.

NO HIGHEST OR LOWEST.

Wesley, one might say, is the lowliest of the Raymond help and, Rose Frank the highest, it being that Wesley showed off the waste-paper boxes in the Washington street store's cellar, while Mr. Dor, as a practically none other than the House of Raymond. But there are no highest or lowest in Raymond's. They're a big-brother, big-sister gang and the slogan is "Ain't we got fun?" Between Wesley's folks and the Lord, Wesley was born col. But does that mean anything at Raymond's? You wouldn't think so if you heard Mr. Dor or his very able daughter wrestle that waste-paper packer with the cheeriest of greetings.

"But, as I was saying," said Wesley, "you know it's a very funny thing about my name. It's in what you might call a class by itself. Why all you gotta do is to write a letter to John Wesley Standawake Henry Ward Beecher Jones, the Wide World, 'n' get it."

He emphasized his statement with a serious nod of the head and dropped half a dozen gum drops into his mouth.

THAT BANDMAN'S COAT.

"You said something 'bout this here bandman's coat," he continued. "Well, I blow on the trombone a lil' n' I kin get somewhere on a piano, but that ain't how I get it. I won't see that coat. I was a watchman up at the Tremont Temple. Just now 'idea working at Raymond's I carry on a lil' file business on the side. You know, Wesley stopped to shove about any other bandful of gum drops—we all leave the money 'n' get it. Just to get it."

WE MOVED AWAY FROM WESLEY, contemplating his thirty years with Raymond's and his Potomac slant on life and picked out the fellow who had interested us in the parade which had formed in Framingham. He marched to the Dor, where there was "Uncle Sam," tall and hazy, Devonshire farmer who owned fine furs brought to life—no one but John L. Barker of the clothing department. There with "Key-Whose Cops" with their "groceries" and stuffed clothes. Joe J. Barker, store detective at their head, all seven the famous and gruff attention.

SOME NUTTY GIRLS.

Agnes Ragan and Sophie Davis in gaudy suits of preposterous bandy colors, with Niles green blouse and hat, to match. Olive Crowlino, no less, too, and got down a mental memorandum. Olive, a ripe Olive, if you should say, and she was working in the "men's" suit and we are a thin set from disservice.

We shall let Olive "suit" us, having tried a sliver of Raymond's street but discouraged three boys of lighting that tried to get fresh with her.

There's Bill McKay, a store detective, in the hat, who spotted the jazz a week hence who tried a dollar shirt during a Raymond rash, which, by the way, is every day. Bill says they're strong enough with him will open at Camp Devens on Saturday.

YOU MUST MEET DELIA.

But say, the dear of them all. We want you to know her, Delia Horton of the "hard goods." Delia ought to be on the stage. She's what old Ivy Cobb would call the "me of the party." Delia had 'em in hysterics yesterday, and a year ago, Mr. Dor informed us.

Delia's dear. She was made up as a country sister, a Jaka you know with the fingerless gloves, toes paraded and an air that's awfully good. She worked, or did her stuff as we say to our set, with Walter Mages of "the groceries."

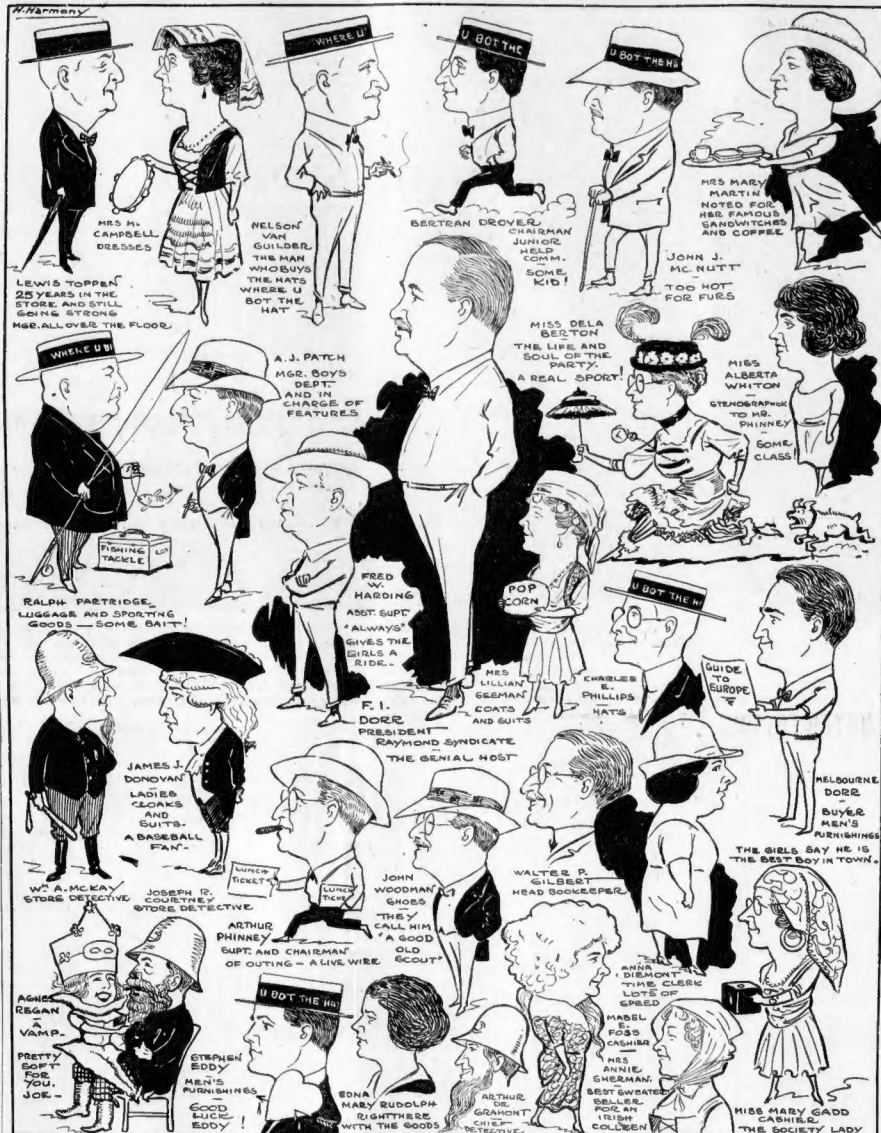

Walter was dressed up as a "Jes Glee" with a carpet bag, steel rimmed chapeau and adobe. Well, at Framingham when the half-hour special car that carried the crowd on the outing from Park Square to the Dor, where the waiting all polished up but Boss Dor and the Framingham band.

Delia saluted the boss and then turned over to her hand. Fiddling with the drum drum she spotted Cliff Dor, soprano cornetist. Cliff sells antique for a living and blows the horn on the side. He stands about as high as a hydrant and looks a little like a life as do most antique dealers.

BUT DELIA SPOT HIM AND WANTED him for a bracelet chain and proceeded to snuff him ragged. "My baby," she started, "my baby" chasing Cliff and his silver horn through the square while Framingham looks out of their teeth laughing line. When the parade started Cliff slid down from a convenient tree but blew a weak horn all day.

Why bring me to the parade, Sister. I wanna tell you that was a jarade. We immediately closed everything we ever saw but as a hydrant and looks a little like a life as do most antique dealers.

But Delia spotted him and wanted him for a bracelet chain and proceeded to snuff him ragged. "My baby," she started, "my baby" chasing Cliff and his silver horn through the square while Framingham looks out of their teeth laughing line. Old Master's Canvas Falls Into Hands of Horse Lover

By Associated Press.

New York, July 5.—Christopher J. Fitzgerald has loved horses all his life and has spent his life looking at them either as a follower of the king of sports or as an official of the Jockey Club.

His affection grows, so to say, that he wants pictures of horses around him, not so long ago, when he saw in an auction room a painting that contained studies of several horses, he bid $400 for it.

Fitzgerald had the painting cleaned. Then it was discovered that he had purchased a work of Isaac Van Ostadi, a Dutch master of the seventeenth century.

An offer of $35,000 has been made for the painting.

He was fined $100 on the charge of selling moonshine.

Aurantine Charlotte of No. 58 Tremont street was fined $100 and sentenced to thirty days in the House of Correction for violation of the liquor law.

GIRL TRYING TO BE SAVED BY HEEL

Poised in her attempt to commit suicide when her hand caught in a twisted gutter pipe on a ledge from the roof of the hotel Northampton on Washington street, two-year-old Mrs. Mary Bigelow was suspended, held downwards for more than fifteen minutes before bystanders came and drew her back to safety.

Hundreds of people in the street, five stories beneath her, looked up in horror as the girl dangled back and forth, trying frantically to release her foot so that she might drop to the pavement.

Occupants of nearby houses, noticing her plight, screamed for help to those in the street. A group of men eventually made their way to the roof, disengaged her arm and hauled her back from the abyss. She is now under a doctor's care.

WANTED TO DIE.

While she hung helpless, seventy feet above the earth, Mrs. Bigelow cried, "I want to die. My husband won't support me! He won't give me any money!"

She was first seen by Miss Marie Louise Swanson, who lives in an apartment across the street.

"I was sitting in the parlor here when I saw a girl walk toward the edge of the roof and Miss Swanson, 'I didn't pay any particular attention to her until she threw her body over the edge. I gaped with fright, expecting to see her fall to the pavement. She was caught, but just as she jumped, she accidentally stuck one foot between a sort of gutter pipe and the edge of the roof. When she fell, her foot was caught, so that she hung head downward over the street."

"She continued to wrench her body around, as if she was trying to throw herself down, and kept saying that her husband wouldn't support her and that she wanted to die."

DRAWN BACK TO SAFETY.

The hotel Northampton is closed. When men tried to enter by the front door, to get to the roof, they found it locked. The back door, also, was bolted. Finally they made their way into an adjoining building, went to its roof, and crossed over to the roof of the hotel.

Mrs. Bigelow struggled so violently, despite the length of time she had been suspended in the air, that when they tried to pull her to safety they were nearly carried over the sides of the roof with her. They persisted, however, and eventually succeeded. In drawing her back to safety.

According to those who carried her to the room, Mrs. Bigelow was badly hurt by the wrenching given her hand and leg. She was close to a physical and nervous collapse when rescued, and a physician was summoned as soon as she was taken home.

Other members of her family could give no reason for her attempt. Other than the one she stated, while hanging over the pavement.

EDUCATORS AT ODDS OVER THE TOWNER BILL

Their enthusiasm undiminished by weeping skies, the more than 1,000 teachers attending the convention of the National Education Association today devoted themselves with renewed vigor to a lengthy program.

Beginning with the Department of Child Hygiene at Normal School Assembly Hall at 8 o'clock, the day was crowded with meetings, conferences, discussions and receptions. At an open meeting in Mechanics Hall a musical program by the Galla Rymphony Band will be presented.

The report of committees on salaries, tenure and pensions was read in the general meeting at Mechanics Hall this morning. The reports of committees on rural schools, county superintendents and the joint committee of the National Education Association and the American Legion also were read.

NOTED SPEAKERS TONIGHT.

At the meeting tonight the speakers will be George A. Warkes of the New York State College of Agriculture, Agnes Samuelson, Pace County school superintendent, Charlotte, La. James Herbert Keays, secretary of the Pennsylvania State Teachers Association, Ethel Varney, department of rural education, Teachers' College, Columbia University, J. L. McElroy, Indiana State Normal School, Terre Haute, and John J. Thurt, U. S. Commissioner of Education.

What is termed "an honest consideration of the proposals actually embodied in the Towner-Sterne bill in Congress" is demanded in a statement issued this afternoon by the legislative committee of the National Education Association, which takes exception to an editorial in a local paper Sunday.

That a disavowal on the issue of the bill between local factions and valuing delegates who are enthusiastic supporters of the Towner-Sterling measures was likely to come has been the belief of local teachers.

According to the statement issued by the association in answer to the editorial, the meeting held throughout the country resulted in pledged support from audiences, both lay and professional, numbering hundreds of thousands. The statement further points out that this bill in no way permits Federal control over the school problems of any State.

TEACHERS' PENSIONS.

The permanent establishment of a teachers' pension and disability fund, in States where such a fund is not already authorized, was urged today by the National Education Association, in session at Convention Hall.

The matter was presented by Philip E. Carlton, president of the Minnesota Education Association of Minneapolis.

A plan for sex education in colleges was made by Dr. M. J. Ekner of the American Social Hygiene Association of New York.

"A study of 548 college men, made several years ago revealed that a vast majority of them received their first permanent impressions of sex at a very early age, and for the most part from distinctly unwholesome sources."

"This misinformation during the formative years of childhood and youth," Dr. Ekner explained, "explains why we find the subject of sex unduly occupying the consciousness of adults."

Dr. Albert Rhine of Teachers' College, Columbia University, declared the proposal to suppress newspapers printed in foreign languages. He said such action would cause an insurrection against American institutions.

Frank Irving Conover, Boston, of the Committee on the Standardization of Schoolhouse Planning, said that under the present haphazard system of planning "seventy-seven per cent of school spacing was lost."

TRAPS "LITTLE RED SCHOOL."

The "little red schoolhouse" came in for considerable censure when Blue Penna W. Dunn of Columbia University charged its cult with being a serious obstacle to educational progress in America. Despite efforts at consolidation, declared Blue Dunn, there are still 200,000 one-teacher schools in the United States today.

Training for "complete living" in the incorporation of measures for child health into the routine of school life was urged by Dr. Charles H. Keene.

MICHIGNEN STEP OFF TONIGHT ON LONG WESTERN JOURNEY

RAVIGWAM HOLDS UP FINAL CONTEST

By NICK FLETCHER

The Braves go marching out into the West tonight, and there'll be no signs of celebration or sounds of cheering as the pilgrims start. The Vignettes have blown wide apart during their vacation on their own and are sorrowfully being brought back to the club.

The team has been the real surprise of the baseball year. Generally feared in the Spring, it couldn't get going at all. Then, on the start of a Western trip, things improved, and the outfit started to climb a ladder of success to that last encounter with an other team.

Then the club came home and proceeded to swat and smite the west team in the league with great vim and vigor. The game was kicked off at three o'clock in a row. The last and the Braves each lost three games out of four here. It looked then as if the real power of the club had been developed.

It was when the season was over that the Braves were discovered. They were flayed by the Press, a over in Quakerism and it was a good thing that they were not in the line of the first of the season. The Braves were discovered.

Will Take a Flock of Victories to Get Them Out

It will take a little flock of victories to get them out, too, although the Philadelphia entry had lost consistently to everybody but the natives here. Only two victories have been snatched out of a dozen, and with Kasey Whitte's crew, giving the Quakers another an offer. If you see up the rear candidate.

Injuries knock regulars out with great force. The team is not a hard hitting one, but it does not help much. The team is not a hard hitting one, but it does not help much. The team is not a hard hitting one, but it does not help much.

Washington, D. C., July 5.—The Red Sox left here last night more than pleased with their fourth day's visit to Washington, as they had the satisfaction of making it hold on the four games played, winning the first, losing the second, winning the third and tying the fourth. The Sox were shut out in both the first and second games, but they did not do so well as the Sox in the fourth game. FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By Monroe Roberts

Reduction in official discount rate of the banking institutions on both sides of the water, the pickup of the liquid resources of banks and investing institutions and the completion of July settlements should constitute a combination of factors for more active and higher prices for prime investment securities, and it should require neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet to forecast the evening up of investment bonds, which have lagged behind the market in recent weeks. If it is logical to expect a falling off in business on the third stock market, the same logic should apply to the upward progress in the market.

The current advance on Liberty bonds is gratifying from every standpoint, not the least of which is the fact that the status of these bonds as collateral for loans has improved 20 per cent. during the course of their upward progress in the market.

It is understood that one of the impediments to the success of foreign loans in the United States is the desire of foreign governments to have new issues put out in their own currencies and not in American dollars.

With the present uncertainties of foreign conditions, it is of course entirely unthinkable that American investors should be advised to purchase securities, the ultimate success of which is a matter of such serious concern.

Should there be a strong probability of Spanish pounds and French francs coming back to a rate as proximately normal, investors would be more inclined to purchase securities for profit, but this is problematical.

According to the authentic compilation of the Journal of Commerce in New York, foreign bonds brought in the American market during the first half of 1922 aggregated $55,416,725. This is a record for a new high record for a similar period, since the armistice at last.

The largest total recorded for any one month was during April, when the aggregate of foreign bonds sold out for public subscription was $29,000,000. Included in this figure was $100,000,000 Dominion bonds of Canada 6 per cent. loan.

June contributed $12,589,000 to the grand total and, incidentally, according to the prevailing belief in the financial district, furnished the real reason for the halt in activity.

The fact that two foreign governments are at present in the market for subscription has had a generally sobering effect on the mad rush on part of banks to take new issues.

HEAVY SELLING OF MEXICANS ON CURB

New York, July 5.—Heavy selling of issues of companies having production activities in Mexico was observed on the curb, following the announcement of the Mexican government that the Mexican situation had improved, and that President Obregon had announced that agreement between the Mexican government and the American committee would be approved by the Mexican Congress and would take formal action.

School Teachers Welcome to Boston

Boston has a hearty welcome for the school teachers who are coming to attend their annual convention. Nowhere in the world is the common school teacher more revered than in Boston. We believe that there is no other place in the world where public school teachers enjoy greater respect.

In a great democracy, based upon universal suffrage, the greatest of all the professions is that of the school teacher. A good school teacher within his or her sphere of action is more important to the public than anybody else in the world.

Our American public school teacher has in almost every department been a great success. Our public schools have been copied throughout the world among the forward moving people.

There has been, however, one department which has not been so successful, that is the department of history. We have not taught the young American mind to function independently in the study of history. Our school teachers have not informed their pupils that many of the great points of history are in dispute and that there are two sides to almost every war and to almost every economic, social and religious struggle.

When a large part of the benefit of the teaching in our public schools lies not in the knowledge acquired, but in the development of the mind in the process of acquisition, the study of history affords a double opportunity, that of developing the reasoning power and of gaining knowledge. We teach our children history as if it were all as clear as crystal, as if nothing were in doubt, as if the whole world agreed upon the same point of view on all subjects as the author of the particular history being studied.

History could be made much more interesting and valuable if we had histories which gave both sides of the important controversies, or if our teachers would take the trouble to present the opposite point of view and would get up debates and discussions in the class, and compel the children to think for themselves, for when they become men and women that is what they must do if they are going to be intelligent voters.

Ex-Governor Foss Praises Senator Walsh for Fight Against Tariff Bill in Present Form

Mr. Governor Foss has taken occasion to say an enthusiastic word for the service our Senator Walsh is rendering to New England in the discussion of the tariff.

Ex-Governor Foss has always been an expert on our American tariff bill. He was elected to Congress in the Republican district as a Republican on the tariff reform issue, that is on the issue to return the tariff to tariff principles and not make it an instrument for creating a monopoly and aiding in the extortion of extortion. Ex-Governor Foss says:

Senator Walsh is doing a good job in Washington. He is calling attention to the way in which the bill will hurt New England and I believe he will be able to accomplish something. People here, unless they closely follow things in Washington, do not realize how much Senator Walsh is doing for them. I think we ought to have a public meeting in Boston, ask him to be present and tell him that we appreciate his efforts to represent the real interests of this section of the country.

Why, this tariff bill, which the Payne-Aldrich bill, the present bill, will, if it becomes law, raise a tax of $52,000,000 on the people of Massachusetts for food-stuffs alone. It puts a 15 per cent. duty on hides and increases the duty on wool.

Mr. Foss declares that the present tariff is threatening New England industries. He himself is the head of one of the greatest of our New England industries, and ought to know something about it.

"As best," he declares, "it is going to be hard enough to keep our industries in operation and prevent New England from becoming anything but a Summer resort. The man who thinks we can save them by putting a high tariff on raw material, who thinks we can sell anywhere we want to, but never buy anything, is deceiving himself. Our industries have been developed so much under a protective tariff, and especially because of the impetus received during the war, that we ourselves cannot begin to consume all they produce. Unless we want our laboring people to lose their jobs and lose them permanently, we must have a share in the markets of the world."

This means, of course, that we must sell abroad what we do not consume, and in order to sell abroad we must buy abroad, because all trade is an exchange. Money merely represents the exchange.

Amoskeag Should Arbitrate

Prevalence of Southern Mill Competition Excuse Shows Need of More Uniformity in Labor Laws

It is reported in our news columns that at the conference in Manchester concerning the Amoskeag Mills, Mr. Dunne, representing the Amoskeag Mills, refused to become responsible for the Southern competition stalling horse.

This is creditable to Mr. Dunne's sincerity. The Southern stalling horse has been a bit overworked by our New England cotton mills. It is generally a Southern branch of a Northern mill competing against the Northern branch.

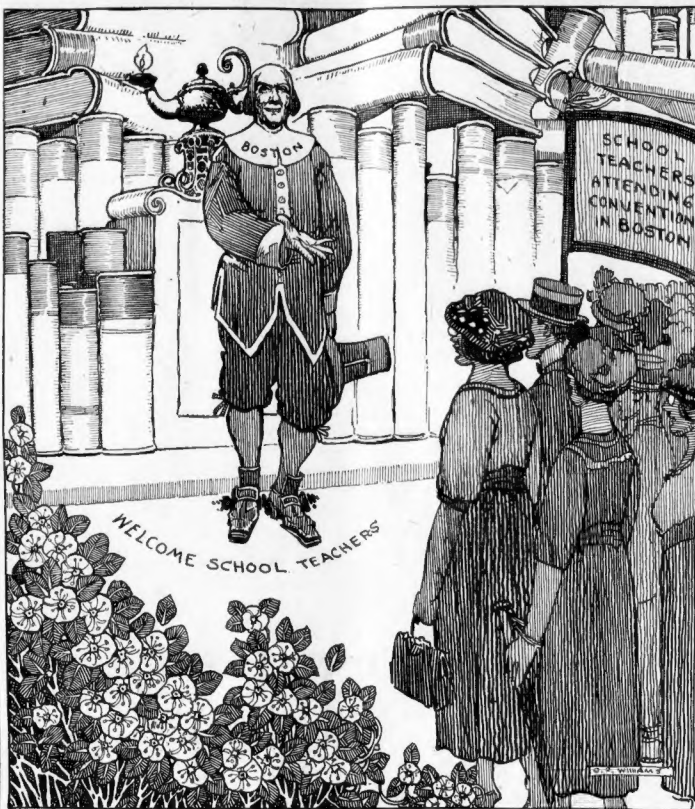

However, the prevalence of that excuse in New England shows the great need of more uniformity in our labor laws so that a backward State may not hold back other States which want to go forward. Congress, in the child labor law, and the law against overtime for women, passed in the last Democratic administration, would have gone a long way to cure this evil. But the law was struck down by the Supreme Court, exercising unconstitutional powers, in our opinion; powers which must be taken away from the Supreme Court sooner or later.

Now that we are on the subject, we again ask the representatives of the Amoskeag Mills, why they do not arbitrate, as their employees ask them to do, and as the New Hampshire Commissioner of Labor recommended they should do?

British Propaganda

Editor Boston American:

"The person who signs self 'Patriot' is an English propagandist for certain. Look at the injured way he or she speaks of our hatred of everything British. I believe the English are going too far with this propaganda of theirs, and the sooner it stops the better for our country. Americans of all nationalities must awake and act in this important matter. Our schools, colleges, universities, churches, papers, etc., are the channels of this English propaganda, and must be met by action, not words. AN AMERICAN PATRIOT."

Small Loans Bill

Editor Boston American:

I noted with a great deal of interest in the Boston American a story with the heading: "Judge Paid $500 to Lobby for Money Lenders," referring to Judge Cohen's efforts to have the rate of interest on small loans raised from 36 to 42 per cent. which was successfully defeated through the efforts of the Credit Union League, composed of a majority of one union in the State of Massachusetts, and the Boston American. No one in the Credit Union League of the State of Massachusetts received one nickel for going to defeat the bill that would have meant a hardship to large number of people in Massachusetts. It was in the interest of purely public service.

How to Kill Rats

Editor Boston American:

As the papers have been calling the attention of the people to the need of destroying rats in most of our large cities, I would like to give you make known to your readers one of the surest and cleanest ways to get them, and one, I think, which is not little known. Take an ordinary wooden pail or half a barrel. Pour in about fifteen or twenty pounds of water, and add a small pail, about three pounds. Mix it with cold water as much as needed, for griddle cakes and mix it in your fork or whisker you use. Then sprinkle a little dry top on, and

STOP PETTY FADDING AND STUDY BIG ISSUES

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

This is addressed specifically to "For Women Only."

The theme is suggested by a bit of advice that came lately from the lips of the only lady Congressman. Representative Alice M. Robertson of Oklahoma. Incidentally, she declared that she is not the representative in Congress of any women of a woman's party, but is there in the interests of all the men and women of her district.

Which is as it should be, for there is no more reason why a female representative should be in public office as a woman than that men should represent only their fellow males.

When Representative Robertson, who was visiting Boston at the time, was asked to leave a message for the voters of New England, particularly the women, she said:

"Stop petty fadding and study the big issues."

Sound advice for the women of New England—and equally sound for the women—and men—of our land. Stop fadding and study the big issues!

Rightly too, Representative Robertson requests her fellow females to take so odd because of their pettiness.

There is the injustice of the attitude of many of our "women-faddists" who want all the perquisites of the "old" women and they demand all the prerogatives of the male of the species.

This is an unfortunate day for women "faddists" who are always, with a single phrase, the vanity came and all its contents, dignified, worth-while life of which aristocratic democracy dreams.

If This Is Your Birthday You Are LUCKY

YOURS should be an interesting life, if today is your birthday, for there is in your character a great love of life and an intense desire to live it to the utmost of your possibilities. This is an unfortunate day for you, for you are always, with a single phrase, the vanity came and all its contents, dignified, worth-while life of which aristocratic democracy dreams.

Once-Overs

ARE YOU A LAZY DREAMER?

You are always losing your things—your hat, your eyeglasses, the package you were carrying.

What is the reason?

Let it be because you never have any very definite aim when you set out in the morning, or when you start for stores or the home of another?

You cast about for something to do. If you are at home during the day, you are just as aimless as another. You are just as good as another. You are just as complacent as another.

That is where you are wrong. That is where you are weak. That is where you are foolish. That is where you are stupid.

You would be shocked if you were told that laziness is at the bottom of your fumbling habits and your far-away slouching, which is always waking up in startled fashion with a realization that you have lost something or something has gotten by you, don't you know? Brace up!

Another and settle out of sight. This is a much better way than pottering them, as then they go away somewhere and find you.

SEEN AND HEARD

DR. FRANCIS X. MAHONEY, health commissioner of the city, is about to start his annual campaign for the extermination of the pesky mosquito. He will direct the spraying of stagnant pools, ponds and swamps in the outdoor sections in an effort to stop their breeding. 1,600,000 square feet of land was covered last year, and it is estimated that nearly 3,000,000 will be covered this year.

HERBERT E. ELLIS, chief adjutant of the Board and Housing Committee, who has settled near 75,000 complaints from tenants, recently celebrated his twenty-eighth wedding anniversary.

MICHAEL H. CROWLEY, superintendent of police for years has sung "Tim Toolan," an old Irish song, "whenever a crowd gathered for vocal effort. He surprised 'em all at the recent wedding anniversary celebration of Mayor and Mrs. Curley by singing a new version, with "Curley" substituted for "Tim Toolan." One line went: "Every now and then we vote for Curley."

ARTHUR D. HILL has no sympathy with the non-technical technical terms which are the "English" expression of good from time to time. He said a justice of the Supreme Court said to him, "I think you could understand legal cases if you would discuss them in English."

REPRESENTATIVE EDWARD F. HARRINGTON of Fall River, who has just completed thirteen consecutive years in the House, holds the long-distance record for continuous service. He expects to be re-elected at the end of the coming term but will have rounded out fifteen years.

The two twin stanchions in Boston harbor—Spectacle and Moon Islands—are to go. The city will soon spend more than $50,000 in perfecting machinery for the abolition of this nuisance.

RE. REV. MONSIGNOR

SPLAIN is perhaps the "happy" word in Massachusetts.

Whether in the pulpit or on the platform, he invariably begins with: "I am happy to be with you" or in making an announcement: "I am happy to be able to announce, etc." And he really radiates the glad spirit when he says this.

mal fauna New York ever had, and it is of special interest to note the great abundance of these creatures in the State during the time of the recession of the post-glacial waters, especially over the swampy highlands before the land had settled down to its present altitude. After all the disturbances to which the soil of New York and its contents have been subjected, the various other agencies attacking and destroying the integrity of the remains, the abundance of the recorded discoveries of mastodons in the State can only be interpreted as indicating the fact that in their heyday these animals were so abundant here as the buffalo were on the plains seventy-five years ago."

The men of the stone ages in Europe made pictures of the mastodons, and the mastodons lived true to life—for we know just how that animal looked through the discovery of ice-preserved specimens in Siberia—but, although some scratches on some recently found in the United States have been thought to be possible attempts to represent the mastodon, yet the evidence from clear or trustworthy. In fact, we have no proof that man existed at all in New York State at the time when the mastodons were there. He may have countered the mastodon, but the evidence that he did is lacking.

Yet, except pictures for climatic obstacles, there is not a priori reason why men and mastodons should not have been contemporary in the eastern United States, and the mastodons, central belt of the country where the borders of the ice lay during the last glacial period, where mastodons remains are abundant. Hence, one of the most interesting explorations that could be undertaken, viz., the outlines of the mastodons, come human remains in North America, and the mastodons, be the case—with similar remains chonding in Europe.

When You Go to Europe Personally Conducted, Your Baggage Is Easily Lost

Some people hate traveling, but they wouldn't mind it if they'd let the travel bureau do it for them. Tourists are like bananas, they travel in bunches.

But don't get the idea that these tours are excursions for the idle. They are for the serious.

These tours are personally conducted, and there is a guide along with you who knows just what you want to see. They carry a card which tells you exactly what to look out of the train window.

One old maid went on one of these tours because she had a "husband" who was a member of the House of Commons of Europe. She liked them so well that she brought him home with her and married him.

When you travel in Europe you don't have to look for the name of the station. You carry a card which tells you exactly what to look out of the train window.

So if it's Friday you know you are in Rome.

So if it's Wednesday, then you're in London.

You don't even have to worry about your baggage. They can look after it just as well as you can.

They arrange everything in advance, and you can tell today exactly what hotel window you're going to be looking out of two months from now and what you're going to see.

If you are in the habit of getting the sea sick, they include your meals with your ticket, so you don't get seasick then they charge you extra.

The personal conductor is always ready to tell you what to do in case you get seasick, but he doesn't have to.

A lot of these excursions are just like one big family, always fighting.

They don't object to a man and wife fighting. They want everybody to fight at home.

The tourist office has postal cards from all over Europe. You can buy them here and mail them to your friends from this side and save one cent on each of them.

If you write all of your correspondence before you leave it will give you more time to yourself when you get across the ocean.

One girl continued to write to her husband every day, so he wrote twenty-four letters and gave them to her before he left.
